the St. John's Guild as a floating hospital. Many poor children and their mothers have made trips on the boat about the rivers and harbor of New York during the heated term. The old boat was built in 1889.

A special train, which left New York this morning, brought a number of guests to the launching. They returned later in the afternoon after having had luncheon served at the yard. In the party were Mr. and Mrs. John S. Rogers, Duff G. Maynard, Isaac N. Seligman, Dr. Abraham Jacob, Leeds Johnson, Carlton Montgomery, Mr. and Mrs. Halph W. Horne, Seymour L. Cromwell, Prof. William H. Burr, Mrs. William H. Burr, Edward Roesler, Henry L. Des Anges, Dr. and Mrs. Edward Collie, Mrs. Henry Dr. and Mrs. Edward Collie, Mrs. Henry P. Talmadge, Miss Lucy W. The vessel was christened by Mrs.

Juilliard. The christening was not carried out in the regulation way with wine, but nowers were thrown on the vessel as the slid down the ways and doves of peace were liberated.

The new hospital boat is a wooden vessel fitted in the most modern way. It has no power except for furnishing heat, light and other auxiliary purposes. The vessel is 215 feet long, 43 feet wide and draws 10 feet. In appearance it is not unlike a modern houseboat, except that the upper decks are not enclosed as they would be on a houseboat. It will carry 1,600 persons. On the lower deck is a large dining

On the lower deck is a large dining room at the forward end which extends the full width of the boat and has large windows on each side, giving plenty of light and ventilation. This room will accommodate 600 persons. The upper deck is a hospital. There are wards for sick children, equipped with cribs, and wards for sick mothers which have full sized beds. There is an examination room and at the other end a reception room for guests, staff dining room and attring room for the nurses, and rooms room for guests, star dining room and sitting room for the nurses, and rooms for the doctors. On the hurricane deck is an isolation ward in case a contagious disease should be found among those on board. There are staterooms for the captain, engineer, mate and doctors.
